Lookouts Spot Fire

Two volunteer fire lookouts may have prevented a disaster by alerting the Marin County Fire Department to smoke on White Hill in West Marin on October 4. While on duty at the Mt. Barnabe lookout tower, Michael Fischer saw gray smoke rising, and Steven Post at the Mt. Tam tower confirmed the sighting. Using fire-finding tools to triangulate, the two volunteers pinpointed the location. Firefighters got there fast and contained the damage to less than three acres.

Meanwhile, on a personal note, Michael’s daughter just happened to be at a business meeting in Woodacre that day. “They had to break off the meeting because of all the fire engines, sirens blaring, thundering by,” he reported. “She knew I had lookout duty and telephoned—and I had the pleasure to tell her that I had spotted the smoke that sent them rushing out.”

He added, “The secret: catch the fire when it’s small and the chances of controlling it are high. That’s why we volunteer lookouts are up there, constantly scanning, looking for ‘small smokes.’”

Cartoonist Finds the Humor in Aging

By Scott Harrop

John Donaghue’s interest in cartooning emerged long before he began his professional career in advertising, art direction, and design. Back in fourth grade in San Bruno, he was assigned a report on the Civil War, and chose to write about cartoons from the era.

“It was kind of an odd choice I guess, looking back on it. But it got me started.”

Soon he was practicing his skills, copying contemporary favorites like Charlie Brown and Dennis the Menace.

During his 35 years in the advertising business in San Francisco, he developed many well-known graphics and ad campaigns for such clients as San Mateo Credit Union, Peet’s Coffee, and Lake Tahoe. He has won multiple awards, and even did commercials that ran on the Super Bowl.

John’s connection to the county was colleague MarinShares volunteer Lynda Pearson, who volunteers as a marketing consultant and Marin Civic Center tour docent. She invited him to volunteer with her on a branding project for the volunteer and intern programs. He has now contributed to three projects: the MarinShares and Marinterns logos, the Human Resources benefits division and wellness program logos, and cartoons for this newsletter.

As he moved into semiretirement, what had always been a hobby became more and more of a focus for John. As he cared for his parents into their eighties, he was struck by the funny sides of elder health care. “I realized getting old ain’t pretty but it can still make you laugh.”

This sparked ideas for a cartoon series. Now, he says, “It’s even more about me, because I’m getting older, too!”

These early efforts have now blossomed into something of a second career. His Facebook page, “Under Cardiac Arrest,” shows greeting cards for baby boomers that are laugh-out-loud funny, sarcastic, sometimes sentimental, and maybe too honest.

His work has also appeared in various magazines, and he is about to publish a book and calendar titled “Social Insecurity.”

John is a long-time volunteer. He developed a campaign to rebuild the Conservatory of Flowers after it was devastated by huge storms that hit Golden Gate Park in the winter of 1995-96. He also designed posters and ads for Golden Gate Park, and drew the logo for the East Bay Regional Parks. “There were plenty of others,” he says modestly, “but I can’t think of them right now.”

Cartoons do more than make us laugh. They can also make us think. “Age is the great equalizer,” he says. “Society doesn’t respect older people very much. They are the last group that can be discriminated against.”

John’s cartoons are featured monthly in Marinfo NOW. “It’s wonderful to have the cartoon series under way,” said Anne Starr, MarinShares coordinator of volunteers. “We’re grateful that Lynda invited John to join her in volunteering here at the county. It’s exciting to have him on the editorial team. Because of John’s imaginative ideas about aging, readers can find a smile—sometimes with a note of wisdom—in every issue!”

In recognition of Suicide Prevention and Recovery Month, the Marin County Mental Health Intern Team organized a Youth Art and Film Showcase for Suicide Prevention.

Pictured at the in-person event held on September 25 are, L-R: Preston Lee, Scarlett Goh, and Colette “Coco” Holcomb. The intern team is a group of Marin high school and college advocates for peer mental health. They designed the showcase to be engaging, inspirational, and provide ways for peers to connect with others.

Preston, a high school senior and videographer, said he was inspired to help after learning that "so many people endure hardship under the radar."

Scarlett, a high school junior, noted that “one way we can help create action through social media is for everyone to share the Crisis Text Line (text MARIN to 741741) or the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline (1-800-273-8255) and to help get the word out. At the end of the day, we just want to keep each other safe.”

The showcase was held at the Marin Health and Wellness campus in San Rafael. Submitted art was also posted on the project website.
